

“Most Likely” Candidates from your Reference “High School” Yearbook

Winners highlighted in yellow.

Most Humorous

- “[mumbling] My lips are numb. I used Nair on my upper lip and now I can’t feel my lips!”

The librarian was initially at a loss but ultimately offered the customer the toll free number for product support at Nair. The asked if she needed medical assistance but the caller said no and that she wouldn’t have called had her girlfriend not screamed at her, “You need to tell someone about this!”

- “Can you put Corning Ware in the oven?”

Yes. Yes you can.

- “My friend gave me his old computer with Internet access. Is this computer going to control my mind?”

The librarian informed the customer that technology had not yet advanced to that stage but offered to find articles or books about Internet addiction and how the case could be made that it the addiction could in fact ‘control your mind.’

- “What is love? How is that different than infatuation? How do I know if he loves me or just wants sex?”

The librarian offered dictionary definitions of the word love and books on dating and relationships.

- “Where can I have my dog frozen cryogenically – at least until they find a cure for old age. Or until I can afford to clone her.”

The librarian found that the Cryonics Institute accepts pets.

- “I should not have listened to 50 Shades of Grey out loud... Do you have the books two and three in audio?”
- A 14-year-old boy approached the desk while on the phone with his mother, “Do you have Entwined with You?”
- “Do you have an original copy of the Constitution for checkout?”
- “Are your CDs compact discs?”
