New info

During the Middle Ages, students usually sat on the floor and took notes using a bone stylus and wooden tablet covered with green or black wax. They may very well have learned that the only things that really frighten elephants are dragons.

In the 21st Century, dragons don't play too much of a role in the school curriculum and most kids get to sit at desks, but there's a lot more out there to learn and that's where your Metropolitan Library System comes in. Sure, we still have the books and magazines to support those research papers, but we also have public access Internet computers and more than that, as you'll see in this issue's information articles. Public libraries have always been an element of the people's free education and MLS is proud to carry on that tradition.

August may mean Back to School for a lot of people, but it needn't mean the start of scholastic Dog Days. Stay cool with us.

Early Baseball in Oklahoma City

by Larry Johnson

Though no one is sure when or where the first game of baseball was played in Oklahoma City, by the summer of 1889, enough citizens were hungry for Cracker Jack that two temporary grandstands were built – one on the west side and one on the east. Baseball also played a central role at one of the first citywide celebrations – Independence Day, 1889. A permanent grandstand was built at the fairgrounds at NE 8 and Harrison in 1890. Over the next decade amateur clubs or company teams played each other and teams from nearby towns. On the diamond a particularly fierce rivalry developed between Oklahoma City and Guthrie, just as it had in non-sporting life.

The first formal professional baseball team in the city was the Metropolitan (Mets), formed in 1902 and played in the Southwestern League against such divine opponents as the Enid Evangelists. They played in Colcord Park, which was part of the very popular Delmar Garden entertainment area just off Western Ave. on the south bank of the river. The Mets played until 1917 when they disbanded during World War I. The team was very popular and street cars actively promoted games by providing special express cars on game days.

In 1919, John Holland's Hutchinson, Kansas team moved here and soon built a new park – Western League Park – on Exchange Avenue just across the river from the old park.

The new team, the Indians, played there until the river washed away Wheeler Park Zoo, Western League Park and a number of other buildings in a devastating 1923 flood. By the 1924 season-opener, they were installed in newly built Holland Field at NW 4 and Pennsylvania; the Indians would remain there until 1958. The new field was a modern park with a parking lot and street car access and in 1930 the first night game was played.

Street cars actively promoted games by providing special express cars on game days.

From 1919 to 1958 the team played in the Western and Texas Leagues and many future major leaguers would play in Holland Field including Carl 'The Meal Ticket' Hubbell and manager Rogers Hornsby (1940-41). In 1949, the Indians were purchased by the great baseball showman Bill Veeck as a farm team for his Cleveland Indians in the American League. Many of Oklahoma City's players, such as Al Rosen and Dale Mitchell, went on to play for the big league club and formed key parts of their 1948 and 1954 World Series teams. By 1958 the Oklahoma City Indians were no longer associated with the Cleveland Indians and falling on financial hard times, the team folded.

Larry "Buddy" Johnson has been with MLS since 1998. Not only a librarian at the Downtown Library, he is the brilliant mind behind the Oklahoma Images database which is a collection of pictures and essays that illustrate the history of central Oklahoma.

Saving CeeCee Honeycutt by Beth Hoffman

reviewed by Phyllis Davidson

CeeCee Honeycutt was not having a particularly sweet life. Her mother was mentally ill, and her father had given up on his former Vidalia Onion Queen wife. He took a job as a traveling salesman, leaving his young daughter to take care of the mother who should have been taking care of her. Momma's behavior was a constant source of embarrassment, and CeeCee was at the end of her rope when Momma stepped in front of a Happy Cow Ice Cream Truck. Right after the funeral, CeeCee's father gave her away to her mother's aunt. Aunt Tootie sweeps CeeCee away to a whole new life in 1960s Savannah. CeeCee struggles to conceal her feelings of guilt about her mother while adjusting to a fairy tale life of love and luxury. She is surrounded by wealthy, eccentric women and a wise black woman who cooks for Aunt Tootie. There are a few bumps along the way, but the story is resolved in a way that is as satisfying as a Georgia peach pie. This is one book you can judge by its beautiful cover.

This title is also available in large print and as an audio book.

Phyllis Davidson is a reference librarian at the Downtown Library. She is the editor of a family newsletter, teaches genealogy classes to customers at the library, and delves into her own family history outside the Library walls.

No Impact Man A documentary film

reviewed by Jana Hausburg

What would it take to live in such a way that we make no negative impact on the Earth? Colin Beaven and his wife Michelle Conlin decide to find out, dedicating a year of their lives to the effort. In the process, they ditch the television, stop eating out, end Michelle's shopping addiction, and eventually turn off their electricity. They find that hooking up some solar powered batteries for their computer and using candles is doable.

Beaven is so committed to the endeavor, it's hard not to be swayed by his earnestness. He admits the whole exercise is probably absurd, but his argument is that one person can make a difference, and perhaps in trying, one can have a positive impact on others. Personally, I enjoyed watching his wife – much more of a realist – try to come to terms with a lack of caffeine, refrigerator, and make-up. And their two-year-old daughter is not at all distressed by the experience. What could be more fun than reading by candle light, stomping on the laundry in the bathtub, and going for long bike rides with Mommy?

I'd like to believe that we, as individuals, don't have to be helpless in the face of such overwhelming odds, that we can fight the consumer culture and take responsibility for our little piece of the world. As No Impact Man illustrates, it won't be easy, but it can be done.

This title also available in book form, On the Shelf: 333.72/B3862n.

A cataloger for the Metropolitan Library System since 1995, Jana Hausburg has the daunting task of cataloging library books before they go on the shelves of your local library.

Romancing Miss Brontë

by Juliet Gael

reviewed by Christine Bassett

There has been a glut of fictionalized biographies published about the Brontë family recently and one can ask do we really need another? After reading this latest one written by first time novelist Juliet Gael the answer is a definitive yes as it is outstanding.

Gael records the heartache, excitement and pathos of life in the Brontë household as the three girls get their first novels published under the pseudonyms of Acton, Ellis and Currer Bell. Their brother Branwell fails to achieve his potential as a writer, instead becoming a drug addict, and several family members succumb to tuberculosis. Charlotte herself suffers from unrequited love for her literary agent and is pursued by another suitor, her father's curate. This romance features strongly in the book, hence the title.

Through rigorous research from original sources, Gael has created a thoroughly engaging story of the last decade of the lives of Charlotte, Emily, Anne and Branwell. The focus is also on the father Patrick Brontë who by 1855 finds himself the sole survivor of his family, being predeceased by his wife and all six of his children.

This title also available as an Adobe EPUB eBook and as an OverDrive WMA Audiobook.

Christine Bassett has worked for the MLS for nearly 10 years. She currently works as a reference librarian at Belle Isle and is a volunteer community literacy tutor in her spare time.

Role Models

by John Waters

reviewed by Doug Bantin

I suspect there is an appreciation of trash art in the heart of even the most high-brow consumers of culture. Just as critics with British accents lead us to the best of capital "A" Art, John Waters is here to guide us through the maze of that with a small "a".

His latest book is a collection of ten essays about the people who have helped him become the man he is today. Waters is always amusing and usually provocative. How else do you describe pieces that discuss people as diverse as Johnny Mathis, Tennessee Williams, Leslie Van Houten and St. Catherine of Siena?

Not having fun with his prose is almost impossible when Waters is at full tide. Try this:

"Little Richard scared my grandmother in 1957. I made a beeline to her out-of-date hi-fi. 'LUCILLE! You won't do your sisters will!' came blaring through the house like a pack of rabid dogs. It was as if a Martian had landed."

You may want to pick and choose the essays you read, but there has to be something in here just for you.

Doug Bantin appears weekly on the MLS TV program "Read About It." Check out his movie reviews in The Oklahoma Gazette.

Three Hispanic Stories for Children as Told by Joe Hayes

Watch Out for Clever Women

Folk tales told by Joe Hayes / Illustrated by Vicki Trego Hill

!El Cucuy! A Bogeyman Cuento in English and Spanish

As told by Joe Hayes / Illustrated by Honorio Robledo

Tell Me a Cuento

As told by Joe Hayes / Illustrated by Geronimo Garcia

Story weaver, Joe Hayes has numerous stories to share in print for a whole new population to enjoy. These old Hispanic tales are brought to life and color with each new reading. Like the fairytales I grew up with; “Snow White,” “Goldilocks,” Hansel & Gretel,” Hayes’ folktales come with valuable lessons.

As grownups share these books with children, it is a perfect opportunity to talk about how the stories are unique to the Spanish culture and how they differ from others. Human nature is pretty much the same all over the world – stupid is as stupid does and greed is greed no matter how you spell it. In !El Cucuy!, the naughty children suffer the same consequences an American boogeyman would enforce.

In Watch Out for Clever Women there are cinco cuentos...I mean five stories. In the introduction Hayes writes, “According to an old saying – ‘A woman thinks more in a minute than a man does in a whole month.’” This superpower, he says is due to the rich inner life many women developed when so much of the external, active life was denied them.

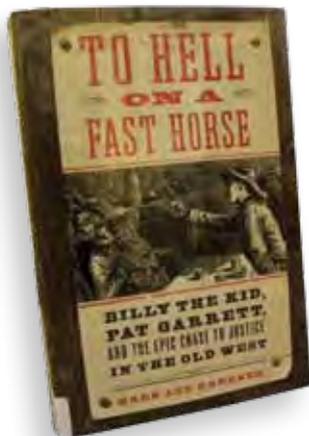

The stories are written in English and Spanish. While the English versions stand on their own, maybe sometime, I’ll try reading them in Spanish just to brush up my Espanola.

Check ‘em out, literally!

To Hell on a Fast Horse: Billy the Kid, Pat Garrett, and the Epic Chase to Justice in the Old West

by Mark Lee Gardner

Thousands of people are intrigued even in the 21st Century by the legend of Billy the Kid, but among them not many have much nice to say about the man who killed him, Pat Garrett. We’ve seen Billy’s death at Garrett’s hand in 1881 represented dozens of times, but how many people know that Garrett lived until 1908 and was shot in the back while involved in a troublesome land deal? One of the participants in the deal was a killer named Jim Miller, who would be lynched in a barn in Ada the following year.

Gardner’s book is an even-handed dual biography of Garrett and the Kid. The book is well-documented and the author lays out the facts of the story with a minimum of speculation. Many writers on the infamous Lincoln County War make cases for competing versions and interpretations of events and let the reader decide. Gardner examines the evidence and then tells it as he thinks events went down.

Billy the Kid may not have been the wild-eyed sociopath he is frequently accused of being, but he was no Robin Hood, either. He was, however, at the center of a fascinating piece of western Americana.

Get Aboard the Learning Express

Taking exams is never relaxing. Even those light-weight tests in popular magazines can give you the jitters, so how much more nervous do you get when you're being quizzed over something important in the real world?

Your Metropolitan Library System can help lessen the tension of work-related test-taking with our Learning Express database, which can be accessed through our webpage www.metrolibrary.org.

From our website select the heading "Catalog and Databases," then log in with your library card number and select the "Databases" option. A list of the databases to which we subscribe pops up and you'll scroll down to "Learning Express Library" and click.

Now you'll get a list of all the available Learning Centers. These include: Elementary, Middle and High Schools; College Prep; College Classes; Computer Skills; GED Prep; Job Search and Workplace Skills; Jobs and Careers; Skill Building for Adults; and U.S. Citizenship

For example, take a look at Jobs and Careers. The subdivisions include: Civil Service, Cosmetology, Electrical, Firefighter, Law Enforcement, Nursing and Allied Health, and Plumbing, among others.

Okay, let's check out the section on Plumbing. Here you find two instantly scored practice tests that offer journeymen and master candidates the essential, authentic preparation they need to score well on the Journeyman or Master licensing exams. The tests offer multiple-choice questions designed to familiarize you with the content of the real exams. You find out your score instantly and detailed answer explanations are provided.

The academic areas that are emphasized at all levels are math, reading and writing skills. Whether you've been in Elementary School for a week or the work force for 20 years, Learning Express offers assistance and instruction for you at your level of education and experience.

Maybe you'll be getting ready to attend college in a year or two. Take a look at the College Preparation Learning Center to get some advice and experience with the ACT, Advanced Placement, CLEP, CUNY, PSAT, SAT, THEA, or TOEFL iBT Preparation.

We can't guarantee that you'll wind up scoring in the top percentile on any of these exams when the time comes to take the real deals, but you will assuredly do better than you would do without Learning Express, and this preparation guidance is absolutely free. MLS is paying the database's subscription fee so you can take and re-take the tests as often as you want to.

If you have questions about Learning Express, check it out for yourself. There's a Frequently Asked Questions page to fill you in on the facts. The database Help Center is easy to find and use.

Take a look. You've got nothing to lose.

BACK TO SCHOOL BACK TO THE

As revealed in this issue of INFO's other article, your Metropolitan Library System provides the Learning Express database free to you for educational purposes. But we also produce live, in-person programming opportunities for parents and students.

OOOL LIBRARY

Three of our libraries are offering computer classes in August. From Edmond Library in the north to Capitol Hill Library in the south—and Downtown Library in the center—library staff and volunteers are on hand to walk students of all ages at their own pace through the intricacies of Computerland. Contact the participating libraries (addresses and phone numbers can be found on the back cover of this magazine) to find out what the content of the August sessions will be.

If you prefer live, hands on instruction for GED preparation, check out the Edmond and Southern Oaks libraries in August. Edmond offers sessions that meet on Aug. 23, 25, 30; the classes at Southern Oaks meet on Aug. 24, 26, and 31. Combine this instruction with the practice tests you'll find at Learning Express and a lot of the nervous anticipation will come out of taking that GED exam.

And we haven't forgotten our youngest library customers and their parents. Six sessions for them have been scheduled in August, including:

- * Reading Readiness at Midwest City Library on Aug. 4, and at The Village Library on Aug. 8
- * School Readiness at Warr Acres Library on Aug. 10
- * Parent Talks at Belle Isle Library on Aug. 5, Capitol Hill Library on Aug. 12, and Warr Acres Library on Aug. 13

Parent Talks cover a wide variety of topics of interest to parents and guardians of young children, and the sessions are led by trained professionals.

Thumb through this issue's Calendar of Events to get a better idea of the contents of these, and all MLS programming in August.

The Ronald J. Norick Downtown Library

The work would be far from finished, but it felt as if much of the load had been taken from the shoulders of the Metropolitan Library System administrators and staff when MLS took the keys to the new Downtown Library on April 26, 2004. And when the library officially opened 16 weeks later, on August 17, the joy was palpable.

Debra Spindle, Manager of the Downtown Library at that time, expressed what the entire staff was feeling. "Not only will our new library offer the people of Oklahoma County the best public library facility in the state, it's also a magnificent work of art in itself. The views, both interior and exterior, are gorgeous, and with our location across the street from the Oklahoma City Museum of Art and near the Music Hall and Stage Centre, we're now a major part of the Downtown/Bricktown cultural and entertainment heart of the city."

The four-story, 112,356 square foot library was the last of the original MAPS projects to be completed. It houses the MLS Administrative Team and several system support departments. In addition to the library, the building also provides a home for the Oklahoma City Downtown College Consortium.

Celebrating its sixth anniversary of serving the public in 2010, the Downtown Library is one of Oklahoma City's architectural gems.

Off the Beaten Path

... Discovering New Literary Treasures

Getting tired of a constant diet of best sellers and book club hype? Want to take a look at what librarians read? Here are two favorite books as selected by MLS staff.

Mister Rogers' Neighborhood: Going to School [videorecording].
EASY/MIS/VIDEO/DISC

If you have youngsters going to school for the first time, maybe easy-going Mr. Rogers can help them get ready. On their first day of school, a group of children find out how good it can feel to learn something new. From the long-running PBS television series.

Mosatche, Harriet S. Where Should I Sit at Lunch? The Ultimate 24/7 Guide to Surviving the High School Years.

646.700835/M894w

Mosatche speaks directly to young adults aged 13-17 about those elements of high school that can be the most frightening—too much homework, popularity and competition—in the no-nonsense way seekers of answers appreciate most.

We're here to serve you.
