We hope that if you still haven't had a chance to visit the new Downtown Library, you'll find time to drop in and take a look at the wonderful new sculpture that's been installed in our Children's Area. See the article on page 10 for some background on this remarkable work of interactive art.

Some of our libraries are presenting programs with an Hispanic flair during this month of Cinco de Mayo, including a mariachi concert and instruction in Salsa dancing at the Ralph Ellison Library, and a display of Flamenco dancing at Edmond Library. All our monthly programs for May are included in the Calendar of Events in this issue.

Stamping our feet or swaying our hips, with or without castanets, MLS has the buleria rhythm in May.

Much Ado About Contented Cows

by Larry Johnson

*Contented cows, you older readers may recall, were what made Carnation's dairy products so delicious.
But the term can also describe white middle class America in the 1950s.*

Either way, this photo from 1956 represents both.

The Carnation dairy store and restaurant was located just west of the corner of NW 23rd and Western. When it was built in 1946, it was among the vanguard of the final commercial attack on Downtown's Main Street. Commercial zones providing daily necessities had been developed at The Paseo, the Plaza district on NW 16th, and at NW 36th and Western, but by the early 1950s the area west of Carnation would see the arrival of the sprawling Sears store at NW 23rd and Pennsylvania, as well as the ones at Penn Square and Shepherd shopping centers along each axis after that.

Twenty-Third Street was lined with bungalows at the time and indeed two houses were relocated to another part of the city to make way for the shiny new building. This Carnation store and restaurant featured a menu very much like the Braum's stores we have today with hamburgers, fries and ice cream treats the mainstays. But it was something new and different in 1946. It was an incursion by a rising national chain during a time when Oklahoma was not considered prime territory for such things.

The Carnation dairy store and restaurant was located just west of the corner of NW 23rd and Western.

The crisp red and white décor accented by shiny stainless steel fixtures was a reassurance to many a stay-at-home mom who typically found hamburger joints were located in holes-in-the-wall Downtown (McDonald's and Sonic were still a decade away). But kids loved its array of shakes, malts, sundaes and such giveaways as vinyl puppets and paper dolls, and many Baby Boomers can still recall begging their parents to go there after church, or savoring a shake after Danse Soiree.

Carnation was in that location from 1946 to 1964.

The building would house the Beef & Bun and later Jack's (run by legend Jack Sussy) before evolving into China Garden, with its streamline topper transformed into a pagoda. China Garden was razed a month or so ago and the bulldozers are preparing the ground for a fabulous new plaza which will serve as a welcome center and gateway for the Asian District.

The Woman Who Watches Over the World: A Native Memoir

by Linda Hogan

reviewed by Kelley Riha

Last fall, I met Linda Hogan and gushed in appreciation for her Pulitzer Prize nominated Mean Spirit. She said she had written numerous books, yet I'd seen only one. Now I am challenged to find and read everything she's written. Two of her novels later and it was time to read something more about Hogan than the inside covers of her books could offer.

In The Woman Who Watches Over the World, Hogan shares the story of her early years. As did many military families in the mid '50s, her family lived overseas and she felt the strain of a parent's alcoholism. In adolescence she pursued a love affair with a man twice her age, acting as his wife in every way. When returning to America, crossing the ocean to leave Germany and her lover, she felt a new freedom as she rode the swells and dips of the expansive sea.

Her experiences are often tempered with pain and heartache. She and her husband adopt two little native sisters. Their hopes for a normal family are destroyed as the girls' problems come to light. Later, Hogan's love of horses becomes the source of a life threatening accident. The events reveal a slate of difficult circumstances and relationships Hogan describes as "broken," but it is from these imperfections that miracles occur.

Who is the woman who watches over the world? She is Native American author Linda Hogan recording observations of how her world turns and how history enters into the present. Written in an easy-to-read journal style, the entries lighten the weight of tragic events that combine to make up Linda Hogan, author and poet.

A Most Wanted Man

by John Le Carre

reviewed by Doug Bentin

A Turkish heavyweight boxing champion sauntering down a Hamburg street with his mother on his arm can scarcely be blamed for failing to notice that he is being shadowed by a skinny boy in a black coat.

Now that's a first sentence to be proud of. Of course, John Le Carre has been writing wonderful sentences at least since The Spy Who Came in From the Cold 46 years ago. Most of his fiction has dealt realistically with the world of espionage and the end of the Cold War was something of a shock to him, but he's been acknowledging that you don't need foreign governments to spy on in a world teeming with secrets.

With A Most Wanted Man, le Carre returns to the classic novel of espionage in which everyone thinks his cause is just and no one sees himself as unpatriotic. The "war on terror" is the new cold war, and it's getting warmer all the time.

Last year, le Carre told an interviewer that his best novels are The Spy Who Came in From the Cold; Tinker, Tailor, Soldier, Spy; The Tailor of Panama; and The Constant Gardener. He must not have read A Most Wanted Man yet.

This item is also available as an audio book.

The B List: The National Society of Film Critics on the Low-Budget Beauties, Genre-Bending Mavericks, and Cult Classics We Love

edited by David Sterritt and John Anderson

reviewed by Doug Bentin

Loving the films of Bergman, Fellini and Welles may make you a cineaste, but to be a real film-lover you have to appreciate the kind of movie that has been called “the Hollywood stepchild, the underbelly of the double feature.” These are the wonderful B movies, with their laughable budgets and endearing casts of has-beens and never-weres, and this book, by the most distinguished film writers still holding down paying jobs, is a great introduction to the back lot world of sweaty cops and robbers, vine-swinging jungle adventurers, and cheesy “Zippers From the Black Lagoon.”

Here are essays about made-on-the-cheap film noir, science fiction, road movies, westerns, rock’n’roll musicals and monster flicks by critics the caliber of Roger Ebert, Peter Travers, Richard Schickel, David Ansen, Richard Corliss, and many more.

This isn’t a list of movies so bad they’re good—most of the films under discussion repay repeated viewings. Read the book, see the movies, and you’ll never confuse cost with quality again.

A Comrade Lost and Found: A Beijing Story

by Jan Wong

reviewed by Jana Hausburg

“I comforted myself with the fantasy that she was alive and well and living in Las Vegas. Then doubts would set in. She must have suffered terribly. Perhaps she was dead.”

Many of us bear the wounds of youthful injustice. Whether real or imagined, betrayal is one of the key paths to maturity and growth, of transformation from child to adult. Few betrayals, however, carry such retribution as those associated with China’s Cultural Revolution, in which informing on another could lead to denunciation, re-education -- and often, death -- for the accused.

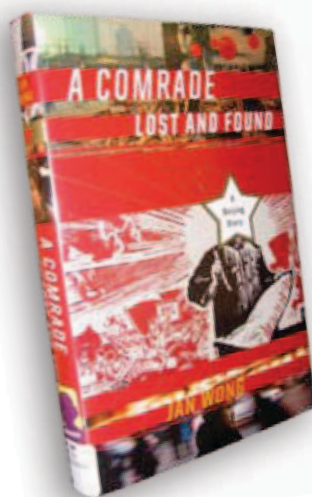

Jan Wong’s memoir deals with her struggle to come to terms with a painful truth. As a young college student in the 1970s, she left her home in Canada to pursue an education in China. A third-generation daughter of Chinese immigrants, she yearned to connect with her distant, ancestral home. She arrived at the height of Mao’s Cultural Revolution and was seduced by the fervor of Communist Party propaganda. When classmate Lin Yuoyi expressed an interest in visiting American, Wong reported her to the authorities.

Years later, Wong finds it difficult to accept what she’d done. Was it naïveté, delusional thinking, or something more insidious? At the time, she “desperately wanted to believe that socialism was superior to capitalism. I was still in love with China, and falling out of love would be a long, slow, painful process.”

With only a name, four weeks, and no real leads, searching a country of 1.3 billion seems an impossible task. But the quest to find Lin forces Wong to examine what motivated her – and so many others – to betrayal.

A cataloger for the Metropolitan Library System since 1995, Jana Hausburg has the daunting task of cataloging library books before they go on the shelves of your local library.

Bleeding Hearts

by Susan Wittig Albert

reviewed by Phyllis Davidson

If there were an herb that could cure broken and bleeding hearts, China Bayles could make good use of it in this 14th episode of her herb shop series. The principal of Pecan Grove High School asks her to investigate an anonymous tip that the popular coach, Tim Duffy, has a nasty habit of taking advantage of young female students.

When China follows the tip to Friendship, TX, where Duffy previously coached, she finds a mother grieving the death of her daughter—and blaming her death on Coach Duffy. The mother refuses to believe her daughter committed suicide, but nobody will listen to her side of the story. After all, Duffy is a winning coach, and therefore, above reproach. Meanwhile, China's stepson is trying to help his girlfriend cope with something so disturbing she won't talk to any adults about it.

As China works to uncover evidence of Duffy's connection with the suicide victim, she is summoned to her own mother's ranch to help solve a family mystery. The Duffy mystery is neatly resolved, but the family mystery will be carried over into the 15th episode, Spanish Dagger, which, fortunately for me, has already been published.

The Independence of Miss Mary Bennett

by Colleen McCullough

reviewed by Christine Bassett

Jane Austen is alive and well in the 21st century, or at least her characters are. Love of all things Austen was rekindled in the 1990's with the BBC production of Pride and Prejudice. Since then, readers can't get enough of her writings and authors worldwide have taken the bait over the last decade and been composing plenty of sequels to her storylines.

The latest spinoff is from the Australian author of The Thorn Birds, Colleen McCullough.

All the Bennett sisters and Mr. Darcy are in the story, but the focus is on the middle sister Mary who has been taking care of her frail mother for the last 18 years. When Mrs. Bennett dies, Mary decides to go on her own adventures, leading her into both unexpected dangers and the beginnings of a romance.

McCullough has written a compelling novel that will certainly satisfy the longings of all Austen lovers.

This title also available in Large Print.

“Learning” is Always New

Early in 2008, Madalynne Norick, mother of former Oklahoma City mayor Ronald J. Norick, on behalf of the James H. and Madalynne Norick Foundation, commissioned a new work of art from New York sculptor Susan Geissler. Geissler has been considered one of the nation's most significant realist sculptors since she began her career in the mid-1980s.

Mrs. Norick wanted the work to represent visually the abstract concept of education, and the result was unveiled at its permanent home in the Children's Area of the Downtown Library, 300 Park Avenue, on March 25, 2009. It is an interactive sculpture in three sections. A boy and a girl are listening to a woman read to them. The name "Learning" was suggested by former mayor James H. Norick, and it seemed just right.

At the unveiling and dedication, MLS Executive Director Donna Morris spoke a few words to the crowd of 80 onlookers. "This sculpture depicts three things that are very important to me: art, libraries and learning. We know it will serve for decades to come to remind generations of children and adults of the importance of the library as a center for life-long learning."

The artist was also on hand. Visibly moved by the absence of Madalynne Norick, who passed away a few days before the event, Ms. Geissler spoke touchingly of memories of her patron and about the process of turning an abstract idea into a material work of art.

Both former mayors Norick, James H. and Ronald J., for whom the library is named, spoke, and then several children who were on hand for the unveiling grabbed the cloth that covered the statue and gave it a sharp tug, revealing "Learning" and collecting a laugh at the same time.

The name
"Learning" was suggested by former mayor
James H. Norick, and it seemed just right.

Downtown Library Manager Julie Ballou and several members of her staff were also in attendance, but Julie chose not to speak. "This event is about the Noricks and the art," she explained. "That's where the emphasis belonged and I'm glad it stayed there."

"Learning" is on display at the entrance to the Children's Area on the library's first floor and can be seen during the library's normal operating hours, seven days a week.

"We are honored," Morris added, "that the Norick Foundation chose us to receive this remarkable work of art."

Capitol Hill Library

This year, the Capitol Hill Library celebrates its 58th anniversary. It was born from a bond election in 1950, and opened its doors to the public on November 11, 1951. The new building won rave reviews for its "ultra-modern" design. The 71 x 125-foot building located at 334 SW 26th came in at a cost of $212,694.

And here's a touch of Capitol Hill Library trivia—CH was the Metropolitan Library System's first site to have an "auto-page." This was a book drop that allowed customers to return library books without leaving their cars.

When the Oklahoma County Library System was established in 1965, Capitol Hill was one of only five libraries that formed that initial system. (Downtown—then called "Main"—Belle Isle, Wright, and the now defunct Dunbar Library were the other four.)

In 1975, MLS' Technology, Cataloging and Data Processing departments moved from the basement of the Downtown Library to the second floor of Capitol Hill, and when in 1984 we initiated Phase I of a Long-Range Automation plan with the purchase of a Tandem mainframe computer, it was installed at Capitol Hill.

Today, Capitol Hill Library is anticipating its first major face lift. Manager Phil Tolbert and his staff of ten will continue to serve Capitol Hill's diverse citizenry.

You Want Website? You Got It!

The MLS website address is www.metrolibrary.org and you might be pretty surprised to find out what information and services are accessible from there. On the top of our Home Page are six tabs. The third one from the left is labeled “Catalog & Databases,” which is easy enough to understand. This is where you go to find out what databases we subscribe to. Also, click on that tab to get to our catalog of materials. It’s all included—books, magazines, DVDs, CDs, tapes—well over 1,000,000 items

Now, when you’ve found the item you’re looking for, you can put it on reserve and tell us at which library you want to pick it up. If you live, say, in Bethany and the book you want to read is on the shelf at the Edmond Library, you don’t have to drive to Edmond to get it. Have the book sent to the Bethany Library and you can pick it up there in a day or two.

Neat. Saves you time and gas money. How will you know when it gets to Bethany? Sign up for email notification and our computer will send a message to your computer.

And if you don’t find the title you’re looking for, you can even suggest that we buy the item for our collection.

But what if the item you want is owned by the library system but every copy is currently checked out—you know, that new John Grisham thriller. You can check in the “Reserves” section to find out what your place on the reserve list is. We’ll tell you how many copies of the book we bought and how many reserves were placed ahead of yours. If a friend has loaned you her copy of the book and you want to remove your name from the list, here’s where you do it.

Or how about this: you’re going out of town for a few weeks and you want to make sure that you’ve returned all those CDs you borrowed from us. Go to the “Borrower” section to see what you have checked out and when it’s due back. If you have a fine for keeping Madonna’s “Hard Candy” checked out too long—it’s possible—and you’re ready to pay, you can go from this page to “Online Payment” and get caught up by using a credit card.

You can also find out what magazines we subscribe to, what libraries have specific titles, and how many issues they have available for check out. Yes, we have MAD; no, we don’t have Playboy.

Spend a few minutes exploring our website. It’s always changing and always makes using the library a little easier.

Children do not have to be present at these sessions. Please call 425-4412, Child Guidance, to schedule your appointment with Robyn Sears M.S. Child Development Specialist and Deborah Shapiro M.S. CCC-SLP Speech-Language Pathologist.

Caldecott Art Club May 9 | Sat | 10:30-11:30a Ages 5 and older

Artist Christina Heffernan will lead children in painting colorful trees like those in the award winning book, A Tree is Nice. Art supplies are provided. Please pre-register.

Children Caught Reading May 11-16 | Mon-Sat | Library Hours Ages 5 and older

During the week of May 11-16, children "caught reading" in the library will receive a prize. Warr Acres Library is celebrating Children's Book Week May 11-16 and "Get Caught Reading Month."

Warr Acres Book Club May 11 | Mon | 11a-Noon All Ages

The Warr Acres Library Book Club meets the second Monday of each month. This month we will read and discuss The Guernsey Literary and Potato Peel Pie Society by Mary Ann Shaffer.

Play Time for Babies and Tots May 13, 20, 27 | Wed 9:15-10a or 10:30-11:15a Ages 8-30 months

Play promotes healthy development and learning, so bring your youngster to our library for 45 minutes of toys, lap games, and a story with Miss Alma and her puppets. (Siblings are welcome) Pre-register at 721-2616.

Children Reading to Dogs May 14 | Thur 6:30-7:30p 5 years and older

Lovable dogs and their trained owners will help children develop reading skills. So grab a favorite book and enjoy a time of reading. You may bring your own favorite book or read one from the library. Dogs and their owners are trained and certified as dog therapy teams by Therapy Dogs International. Please pre-register.

Ice Cream Social May 16 | Sat | 2-3p Ages 12-17

Let's do some splits!! Food and fun for everyone. Please call 721-2616 to let us know you are coming.

Warr Acres Coffee Break May 18 | Mon | 9:30-10:30a Adults

You are invited to join us for coffee and light refreshments. Bring a friend or meet someone new at the library. Coffee Break will be followed by Brain Games. Let the coffee and games wake up your brain!

Brain Games May 18 | Mon | 10:30-11:30a Adults

Come for Coffee Break and then stay for Brain Games. Learning new things and making new connections can keep our brains young and healthy, and it can be fun, too! We'll have Big Brain Academy on the Nintendo Wii, and supply you with some quick fun things you can do to help you take care of your brain.

Lullaby and Goodnight Workshop May 19 | Tue | 3:30-5p Adults

Having a routine, which includes reading to your child, can ease both bedtime and naptime challenges. We will discuss sleep challenges as well as the advantages of reading to your child so that the whole family can get a good night's rest. Facilitated by Deborah Shapiro M.S. CCC-SLP Speech-Language Pathologist & Robyn Sears M.S. Child Development Specialist. Call 425-4412 to register. Free of charge.

Pajama Storytime for Preschoolers May 19 | Tue | 6:30-7:30p Ages 2 1/2 to 5

The "Gingerbread Boy" invites you and your child to a fun story time with Miss Alma and her puppets. We will act out the story of the gingerbread boy; enjoy cookies and milk; and yawn with "Honey Bear." Please call to pre-register.

Game Night May 28 | Thur | 6:30-8p Teens 12-17

Come join us for Rock Band, Super Smash Brothers and more! Please call ahead to register.

Off the Beaten Path

... Discovering New Literary Treasures

Getting tired of a constant diet of best sellers and book club hype? Want to take a look at what librarians read? Here are two favorite books as selected by MLS staff.

Jones, Gerard. Men of Tomorrow: Geeks, Gangsters and the Birth of the Comic Book.

741.50973/J771m

Free Comic Book Day is May 2, but you can stretch your (nostalgic?) appreciation of comics out all month with this recent history of the form. Jones' knowledge is wide and deep, but his scholarship never gets in the way of readability and he knows how to tell a good anecdote.

Pilcher, Tim, and Brad Brooks. The Essential Guide to World Comics.

741.509/P637e

Comic books may have been born in the U.S.A. but today they maintain a world-wide popularity. This book explores comics from Latin America, Europe, Asia, the Middle East, and Down Under, as well as the more familiar titles and characters who thrive and fight evil on our own shores. This is a good introduction to a world of color and adventure.
